The BLUE DOOR

RUTH WOODSON, pretty, highapirited girl of 19, in search of work, seeks refuge from a storm in an old stone house with a blue door in the little town of Worthville. The queer old caretaker, BERTHA GIBBS, also known as PENNY, thinks Ruth is ELAINE CHALMERS, whose father built the house. Elaine meanwhile, at Graycastle College, vows in a sororlity meeting to win the love of her childhood hero, JOHN MeNEILL. She pians to go to Worthville.

Elainte, for two reasons; she needs a shelter and she has fallen in love with John McNelli. She is not disconcerted by old Bertha Gibbs' queer actions or by the strange noises she hears in the old house at night.

John McNelli has fallen in love with "Elaine" and finds her congenial company. One night, en route to a mountain lodge for dancing, they are arrested for apeeding and Ruth, not wishing to put the name of Elaine Chalmers on police records, tells the officer her name is "Ruth Woodson." She later tells John this is her "favorite alias." She is happy in John's company, but is accretty planning to slip away and end the adventure.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORX

Elaine diverted conversation from Deauville to Worthville by asking. "Do you ever think of going back to Ohio to visit, Gwen?"
To your old home, I mean?"

As a porter carried her bags away she paused in the doorway of her room to bid goodby to her friend, Hortense Stokesbury, who was applying herself to Renaissance art on the chaise lounge. "Stay as long as you like, Hortense, Elaine said. "These rooms are more comfortable than yours."

"Thanks," replied Hortense, though not graciously. It was not pleasant to be reminded that Elaine's was the choice suit of Graycaste. "I'll stay till time to dress for dinner. Then I'll lock up after me. Well, goodby. Don't wreck Cabby's rhythm at the Windmill Club tonight. He's still playing there, isn't he?"

"Yes," answered Elaine. "But don't worry about his rhythm, He taught it to Duchin and Vallee. By the way, darling, do you mind if I tell my parents I'm spending fall vacation with you in Boston?"
